

Juliette Byrne

Background Juliette Byrne trained at Chelsea School of Art, then at Conran, and set up her company in the Eighties. She has a team of three at her new, Chelsea-based design studio, and has lectured at the Inchbald School of Design, and at the KLC School of Design.

Projects Right now, Juliet is working on the refurbishment of a Chelsea town house involving extensive structural alterations, a Grade II-listed town house in Greenwich, and a basement extension for a Grade II-listed house in Regent's Park. She has also just completed the decoration of rental apartments in a Chelsea riverside development, and apartments in Belgravia and Dublin.

She says My philosophy is to interpret my clients' requirements and carry them out to the highest possible standard, using a team of skilled craftsmen and in-house designers. I like to work within budget and complete the project within a predetermined time frame, providing a turnkey service that blends modern and traditional styles according to the client's brief.

We say A designer who remains true to her motto of 'nothing is too much trouble'. Expect serene interiors, often executed with a muted palette, specially designed bespoke furniture, and a deft blend of old and new.
